THE VIENNA EXPOSITION.

Brilliant Opening Spectacle.

Full accounts of the opening of the Universal Exposition at Vienna, Thursday with the attendant ceremonies and addresses of the Archduke Charles, the Emperor, Prince Von Auersperg, and the burgomaster of Vienna, have been telegraphed to this country. Among these are the descriptions of Edmund Yates, the English novelist, and John Russell Young, the well known correspondent, who have sent to the New York Herald separate accounts of

THE OPENING DAY.

Mr. Young, in his account of the opening, says:

Vienna was shrouded this morning, in cold, unfriendly skies, which did not contribute to the splendor of festival of peace. The clouds threatened rain, and the Danube was ruffled by sharp, piercing winds; but in spite of the disagreeable weather the Viennese were out early and gayly honored the long expected day. Early in the morning the guests who were invited to witness the opening ceremony of the great exposition were bidden to be in the exhibition building at ten o'clock, as the royal guests were expected at twelve. The people who could not gain entrance to it crowded the avenues near it. Under the noble trees of the ancient forests of Hofburg, the palace of the Emperor, to the exposition building, the palace of the world, were eager, hurrying throngs. As became a day of peace, no soldiers were in line, and only an occasional guardsman, in dark Hungarian costume, was employed to point the way. A thin line of citizens, in holiday dress, fringed the path of the procession. Smiling faces, coyly peering into the imperial carriage, were greeted with a welcoming smile in return. Over the different wings of the flags of all nations fluttered in the winds and mingled their colors in friendly contrast, our own, as seemed fit, considering recent events, Union down. As soon as the vast hall, the size of which comes slowly on you, with a full sense of its immensity, was opened, the surging multitude began to fill it, crowding from twenty opening doors. Without and within the scene was exceedingly animated, in some respects exceedingly picturesque—and Vienna, though its welcoming day of spring has often been celebrated with great pomp and magnificence, never before witnessed a pilgrimage to the Prater so brilliant or so magnificent. The effect produced on the mind of the visitor by a first glance at the inside of the exposition building was not agreeable. The raw frescoed walls seemed to weep with oozing frost and rain. The high organ obtruded naked mental pipes, which well-meant banks of greenery would hide. Everywhere everything seemed misplaced. There were statutes, castings groups and canopies hung with clothes and carbets, producing a most grotesque effect. France, as a solemn and preposterous lion, [illegible] hungrily down from an imperial [illegible], and confronted the famous Lake [illegible] group, which celebrates the re[illegible] of Geneva to the arms of Switzer[illegible]. This colossal group became a point [illegible] attraction for American sight-seers, a [illegible] of these astonishing the Austrian Chamberlain by their agility and courage. [illegible] His Excellency the Chamberlain entered [illegible] vast space seemed spotted with black [illegible] in evening dress gathered in patch[illegible] and slowly increasing in number. Then a wave of beauty and color surged into the ladies' boxes in the diplomatic quarter, each beautiful grandee provoking a ripple of wondering comment as she floated to her place.

MAGNIFICENCE OF THE SCENE.

At a single glance one saw the courtliness and splendor of an ancient throne surrounded by quaint and innumerable costumes, decorations, insignia of the variety of races which obey the decrees of the Kaiser. The multitude took every hue and color. Swarthy warriors in the gay apparel of the Danube; Poles, Hungarians and Bohemians in the costumes of their country, and the dress of the armies and navies of the world, our own genuine blue being neither absent nor forgotten, helped to complete the picture. The whole scene was a surging sea of color. At every turn the eye was met by a great display of raiment, black, orange, green and brown; velvets, laces, waving plumes, and unfolding furs and gold and silver braids, until the sombre multitude took life and seemed banks of lillies and roses, relieved with the deep rich color of the [illegible]. A broken lusty cheer comes, like a tempest, rocking the multitude with its [illegible] force. Slowly pacing round the [illegible], under green hanging branches [illegible] cunningly placed shrubbery, the [illegible] party is seen exactly as the hour [illegible] noon.

ENTRANCE OF THE EMPEROR.

The Emperor walks with hesitation, leading the German Princess Victoria, faintly bowing. Behind is the Imperial German Prince Frederick William, in white Austrian uniform, striding along with a stalking gait, and escorting the Empress Elizabeth. Then comes the Prince of Wales, who smiles and bows, especially as his ears catch the lusty home cheer from the British group. Following his royal brother are, Prince Arthur, his fine blue eyes beaming with pleasure; the members of the imperial family, and the great officers of state and the household in gorgeous array, with fringed flunkeys trailing after them. They move on to the dais, where, in a pleased, smiling group, they form a marvelous combination of light, jewels, laces, and superb costumes. All rise as the imperial party ascend the steps, cheer follows cheer, and then the whole multitude is still. The quiet continues while the Emperor turns from side to side making a grave, serious bow, and the music changes into Handel's grand anthem, exquisitely rendered. Then there is another rock and surge of the crowd right into the imperial quarter. It is with the utmost difficulty that order is preserved, even within the sacred limits. The music lulls, and the opening address is made to the Emperor. It is clearly spoken in a few gentle phrases, but no one hears it. Then follow the responses, music by the splendid orchestra, giving in turn the national airs of every country the grand imperial promenade, and the sensation is finished.

The English correspondent, Mr. Yates, thus contrasts

with the Central Park, New York:

Compared with Central Park the Prater is less picturesque, being flat, although pleasantly diversified by wood and meadow—just now, it is true, beautifully fresh and green. The Bois de Bologne is likewise more picturesque, but the Prater avenue is a finer drive. With Berlin Thiergarten there are few points of comparison. The Thiergarten is a large forest, a solitude just outside of the Linden and the Brandenburg gate, that can be reach from the center of the city within five minutes, while the Prater combines both forest and meadow, but lacks the quiet majesty that is connected with the Thiergarten. True, the Thiergarten has nothing better than the muddy Spree in the shape of a river, but the Prater is washed by the "beautiful blue Danube," which, by the way, is gray or lead color, I hardly know which. The park is selected on all occasions by the Viennese for their great festivals.

THE EXPOSITION GROUNDS.

The exposition building stands in a large enclosed space of the Prater, five times as large as the Camp de Mars, on which the Paris exposition stood. On the space from the entrance to the building six fountains send large jets of water. Tastefully arranged lawns and flower beds greet the eye. To the left is a long row of low buildings connected with the director general's bureau; to the right a similar row, for the police, &c. To the left further west, the jury pavilion; to the right is the beautiful imperial pavilion. Wherever the eye is directed are pavilions and ornamental structures. Wandering amid the trees of the spacious grounds one is met by constant surprises. We enter a veritable fairy land, although it must be admitted that imagination has to complete some of the instructures, even though it is the first of May. Fantastically variegated structures, with cupolas and minarets, take us in spirit to the Orient, and to the hieroglyphic enchantment of the Nile, to the peasant huts of Alsace and Lorraine, to the plains of Hungary, to the steppes of Russia and to the schoolhouses and wigwams of America. All people and religions can find their places of worship in this Prater world. A Greek chapel, a Buddhist temple, a Romanian church and the Turkish minaret, may all invite the faithful to prayer before entering the sanctuary of industry and art.

YATES CORRECTS YATES.

In my description of President Grant's inauguration for the Herald I painted glowingly the festive appearance presented by European capitals on gala days. Any one who had read that picture, and who happened to be present here to-day, would have thought my real name was Ananias. The houses of Vienna are bare as robbins. There are no flags on the roof-tops or across the streets, no Venitian masts with flying streamers, no draped balconies, and no triumphal arch until we have reached the south or main entrance of the exposition building.

POLITICAL GOSSIP.

THE STATE CONVENTION.

The Republican State Convention Committee has decided that the next convention shall be held August 13, at Harrisburg. Two months will be ample time [illegible] Commonwealth the reasons why they should support the Republican nominees, and if the Democratic journalists cannot in that period expose all the corruption that each candidate possesses they should not attempt the job. The candidates to be selected are gentlemen who can properly fill the positions of Judge of the Supreme Court and State Treasurer, and already several persons have been named for the first, although it seems to be understood that Judge Paxson of this city will be the choice. The friends of Judge Butler, of Chester, and those of other gentlemen in the State equally deserving are laboring to secure the elevation of their respective favorites, but we shall be much mistaken if our own worthy member of the judiciary is not chosen. As for State Treasurer nobody yet is spoken of in connection with the position except the present incumbent, Mr. Mackey, who has given unqualified satisfaction, save to a few disgusted individuals who could not use him for their own pecuniary advantage.

THE JUDICIARY.

It is generally understood that Hon. Edward M. Paxson, of the Court of Common Pleas, will receive the nomination for the Supreme Bench, in which case a prominent and eligible candidate for the position vacated by Judge Paxson will be found in the person of John Dolman, Esq., one of the most successful and careful members of the bar of Philadelphia. It will be remembered that Mr. Dolman ran for District Judge last fall, receiving about 11,000 votes for the nomination, being second only to Mr. Briggs, who was subsequently chosen Judge. In appointing Mr. Dolman the Governor cannot fail to keep up thereby the high character of the Court for integrity, wisdom, and judicial fairness.

DENIES IT.

Delegate Temple, of the Constitutional Convention, asserts positively that he did not refer to Judge Ludlow in his recent remarks upon the Judiciary. So far as we are concerned, we never thought he did, and that thought is proved to be correct by the fact that he will not deny that his reference was to Judge Paxson. Mr Temple has a huge work on hand—that of cleansing and purifying the Democratic party, but he will find his labors immeasurably increased if he attempts to villify Republican Judges, either because they are Republicans, or because one or the other of them may have given a decision which has been unpalatable to him.

UNCERTAIN.

The Democrats cannot yet make up their minds as to the best course to pursue during the coming campaign. None of their number have yet thought it proper to announce themselves as candidates for positions which they know it is impossible for them to secure, and the impression is, that whatever rules may be adopted, the party will quietly fall in when the so-called Reformers blow their bugle blast, and after securing all the nominations they can upon the ticket, will poll their vote solid with the individuals who luxuriate on Chestnut street, below Sixteenth.

GOING SOUTH.

The appointment of State Senator Wm. A. Wallace to the Vice Presidency of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company is one which cannot fail to be of advantage to the enterprise. Although we have always been opposed to him politically, we have never failed to recognize his legal ability and personal qualifications, and while we do not regret that we lose such an active Democrat from the State, we do regret that the Commonwealth will be deprived of such an intelligent citizen.

DON'T BELIEVE HIM.

Republican voters must be careful how they swallow rumors that such and such a candidate has withdrawn from the field. There is scarcely a day passes that we do not hear that so and so has decided not to run, and yet, in every instance, we subsequently ascertain that the report has been placed in circulation simply to temporarily advance the interests of some one else.

ASPIRANTS.

Mr. A. A. Hauke's friends are laboring indefatigably for the man of their choice, and every Republican of the Eleventh Legislative district is by this time aware that he desires to go to Harrisburg next winter. Mr. Hauke is engaged in mercantile pursuits, and although a hard working member of the party has never received official recognition.

Mr. Charles W. Shuff, of the Fifth ward, is a candidate for Assessor under the new law. Mr. Shuff is president of the National Union Republican Club, and a member of the Ward Executive Committee, and is endorsed by the leading men of the Republican party. He is eminently qualified [illegible]

The friends of Samuel Davis, Esq., are urging him for Common Council in the Fourteenth ward. Mr. Davis is a young Republican of the ward, of considerable ability, and his friends claim that he will receive the nomination, which is equivalent to an election.

Harry Huhn, Esq., of the Fifteenth ward, is announced as a candidate for Senatorial delegate to the State Convention for the Second Senatorial district, composed of the Ninth, Tenth, Thirteenth Fourteenth, Fifteenth and Twenty Ninth wards.

Mr. George Handy Smith, the present Representative from the First district, will be a candidate for renomination, and claims that his constituents are so well pleased with his course last winter that they will send him back.

Mr. Josephus Yeakel, of Mannayunk Sentinel, an accomplished gentleman and earnest Republican, will be a candidate for the Legislature in the Sixteenth district. If chosen, he will be a satisfactory legislator.

Ex Representative Cooper, of Delaware county, will probably be nominated for State Senator. He is in every way qualified for the post, as he has abundantly proved.

Among the gentlemen spoken of in connection with the Judgeship of the Court of Common Pleas in case there is a vacancy in the fall, are Mr. Dolman, Wm. J. McElroy, Samuel C. Perkins and D W. O'Brien.—Philadelphia Sunday Republic.

Hon. James Brooks.

The Pittsburgh Commercial says: The death of Hon. James Brooks is announced. He had been in delicate health for some time and the nervous anxiety occasioned by the Credit Mobilier investigations undoubtedly aggravated his malady. He exhibited a sensitiveness in regard to that transaction which might have been imitated by other parties at least equally implicated with himself, but the ordinary politician is made of course clay, and Mr. Brooks was no ordinary politician. He was a man of rare information, a clear thinker, fine writer and elegant speaker. He was the leader of the Democratic party in Congress and commanded respect no less by the vigor which he always displayed, but by the courtesy which he uniformly exhibited in debate. He has died at the age of sixty-three, and the recollection of the causes which embittered his last days will excite a feeling of sympathy for his memory. Of all the men connected with the scandals recently agitated, he and Colfax were the only ones who seemed touched to the quick by the sense of disgrace. The rest brazened it out as they have the supplementary action—the back pay grab.

PART I.

For the rest, when Edward and Charlotte were alone, there were fewer matters of private interest between then than formerly. This was especially the case since the fault finding about the grounds, which Edward thought so just, and which he felt to the quick. He held his tongue about what the Captain had said for a long time; but at last, when he saw his wife again preparing to go to work above the summer-house, with her paths and steps, he could not contain himself any longer, but, after a few circumlocutions, came out with his new views.

Charlotte was thoroughly disturbed. She was sensible enough to perceive at once that they were right, but there was the difficulty with what was already done—and what was made was made. She had liked it: even what was wrong had become dearer to her in its details. She fought against her convictions; she defended her little creation; she railed at men who were for ever going to the broad and the great. They could not let a pastime, they could not let an amusement alone, she said, but they must go and make a work out of it, never thinking of the expense which their larger plans involved. She was provoked, annoyed, angry. Her old plans she could not give up, the new she would not quite throw from her; but, divided as she was, for the present she put a stop to the work, and gave herself time to think the thing over, and let it ripen by itself.

At the same time that she lost this source of active amusement, the others were more and more together over their own business. They took to occupying themselves, moreover, with the flower-garden and the hot-houses; and as they filled up the intervals with the ordinary gentlemen's amusements, hunting, riding, buying, selling, breaking horses, and such matters, she was every day left more and more to herself. She devoted herself more assiduously than ever to her correspondence on account of the Captain; and yet she had many lonely hours; so that the information which she now received from the school became more agreeably interesting.

To a long-drawn letter of the superior of the establishment, filled with the usual expressions of delight at her daughter's progress, a brief postcript was attached, with a second from the hand of a gentlemen in employment there as an assistant, both of which we here communicate.

POSTSCRIPT OF THE SUPERIOR.

[illegible] ladyship what I have already stated in my former letters. I do not know how to find fault with her, yet I cannot say that I am satisfied. She is always unassuming, always ready to oblige others; but it is not pleasing to see her so timid, so almost servile.

"Your ladyship lately sent her some money, with several little matters for her wardrobe. The money she has never touched, the dresses lay unworn in their piece. She keeps her things very nice and very clean; but this is all she seems to care about. Again, I cannot praise her excessive abstemiousness in eating and drinking. There is no extravagance at our table, but there is nothing [illegible] like better than to see children eat [illegible] of good, wholesome food. What is carefully provided and set before them ought to be taken; and to this I never can succeed in bringing Ottilie. She is always making herself some occupation or other, always finding something which she must do, something which the servants have neglected; to escape the second course of the dessert; and now it has to be considered (which I cannot help connecting with all this) that she frequently suffers, I have lately learnt, from pain in the left side of her head. It is only at times, but it is distressing, and may be of importance. So much upon this otherwise sweet and lovely girl."

SECOND POSTSCRIPT, BY THE ASSISTANT.

"Our excellent superior commonly permits me to read the letters in which she communicates her observations upon her pupils to ther parents and friends. Such of them as are addressed to your ladyship I ever read with twofold attention and pleasure. We have to congratulate you upon a daughter who unites in herself every brilliant quality with which people distinguish themselves in the world; and I at least think you no less fortunate in having had bestowed upon you, in your step-daughter, a child who has been born for the good and happiness of others, and assuredly also for her own. Otilie is almost our only pupil about whom there is a difference of opinion between myself and our reverend superior. I do not complain of the very natural desire in that good lady to see outward and definite fruits arising from her labors. But there are also fruits which are not outward, which are of the true germinal sort, and which develop themselves sooner or later in a beautiful life. And this I am certain is the case with your protege. So long as she has been under my care, I have watched her moving with an even step, slowly steadily forward—never back. As with a child it is necessary to begin everything at the beginning, so it is with her. She can comprehend nothing which does [illegible] flow from what precedes it; let a thing be as simple and easy as possible, she can make nothing of it if it is not in a recognizable connection; but find the intermediate links, and make them clear to her, and then nothing is too difficult to her.

"Progressing with such slow steps, she remains behind her companions, who, with capacities of quite a different kind, hurry on and on, learn everything readily, connected or unconnected, recollect it with ease, and apply it with correctness. And again, some of the lessons here are given by excellent, but somewhat hasty and impatient teachers, who pass from result to result, cutting short the process by which they arrived at; and these are not of the slightest service to her; she learns nothing from them. There is a complaint of her handwriting. They say she will not, or cannot, understaud how to form her letters. I have examined closely into this. It is true she writes, slowly, stiffly, if you like; but the hand is neither timid nor without character. The French language is not my department, but I have taught her something of it, in the step-by-step fashion; and this she understands easily. Indeed, it is singular that she knows a great deal, and knows it well, too; and yet when she is asked a question, it seems as if she knew nothing.

"To conclude generally, I should say she learns nothing like a person who is being educated, but learns like one who is to educate—not like a pupil, but like a future teacher. Your ladyship may think it strange that I, as an educator and a teacher, can find no higher praise to give to any one than by comparison with myself. I may leave it to your own good sense, to your deep knowledge of the world and of mankind, to make the best of my inadequate, but well-intended expressions. You may satisfy yourself that you have happiness to promise yourself from this child. I commend myself to your ladyship, and I beseech you to permit me to write to you again as soon as I see reason to believe that I have anything important or agreeable to communicate."

This letter gave Charlotte great pleasure. The contents coincided very closely with the notions which she had herself conceived of Ottilie. At the same time, she could not help smiling at the excessive interest of the assistant, which seemed greater than the insight into a pupil's excellence usually calls forth. In her quiet, unprejudiced way of looking at things, this relation, among others, she was contented to permit to lie before her as a possibility; she could not value the interest of so sensible a man in Ottilie, having learnt, among the lessons of her life, to see how highly true regard is to prized, in a world where indifference or dislike are the common natural residents.

CHAPTER IV.

The [illegible] ty and its environs was completed. It was executed on a considerable scale; the character of the particular localities was made intelligible by various colors; and by means of a trigonometrical survey, the Captain had been able to arrive at a very fair exactness of measure. He had been rapid in his work. The was scarcely ever any one who could do with less sleep than this most laborious man; and, as his day was always voted to an immediate purpose, every evening something had been done.

"Let us now," he said to his friend, "go on to what remains for us, to the statistics of the estates. We shall have a good deal of work to get through at the beginning, and afterwards we shall come to the farm estimates, and much else which will naturally arise out of them. Only we must have one thing distinctly settled and adhered to. Everything which is properly business we must keep separated from life. Business requires earnestness and method; life must have a freer handling. Business demands the utmost stringency and sequence; in life, inconsecutiveness is frequently necessary, indeed, is charming and graceful. If you are firm in the first, you can afford yourself more liberty in the second; while if you mix them, you will find the free interfering with and breaking in upon the fixed."

In these sentences Edward felt a slight reflection upon himself. Though not naturally disorderly, he could never bring himself to arrange his papers in their proper places. What he had to do in connection with others, was not kept separate from what only depended on himself. Business got mixed up with amusement, and serious work with recreation. Now, however, it was easy for him, with the help of a friend, who would take the trouble upon himself; and a second "I" worked out the separtion, to which the single "I" was always unequal.

In the Captain's wing, they contrived a depository for what concerned the present, and an archive for the past. Here they brought all the documents, papers and notes from their various hiding-places, rooms, drawers, and boxes, with the utmost speed Harmony and order were introduced into the wilderness, and the different packets were marked and registered in their several pigeon-holes. They found all they wanted in greater completeness even than they had expected; and, here an old clerk was found of no slight service, who for the whole day and part of the night never left his desk, and with whom, till then, Edward had been always dissatisfied.

"I should not know him again," he said to his friend, "the man is so handy and useful."

"That," replied the Captain, "is because we gave him nothing fresh to do till he had finished, at his convenience, what he has already; and so, as you perceive, he gets through a great deal. If you disturb him, he becomes useless at once."

Spending their days together in this way, in the evenings they never neglected their regular visits to Charlotte. If there was no party from the neghborhood, as was often the case, they read and talked, principally on subjects connected with the imrovement of the condition and comfort of social life.

Charlotte, always accustomed to make the most of opportunities, not only saw her husband pleased, but found personal advantages for herself. Domestic arrangements, which she had long wished to make, but which she did not know exactly how to set about, were managed for her through the contrivance of the Captain. Her domestic medicine chest, hitherto but poorly furnished, was enlarged and enriched, and Charlotte herself, with the help of good books and personal instruction, was put in the way of being able to exercise her disposition to be of practical assistance more frequently and more efficiently than before.

In providing against accidents, which, though common, yet only too often find us unprepared, they thought it especially to have on hand whatever is required for the recovery of drowning men—accidents of this kind, from the number of canals, reservoirs, and waterworks in the neighborhood being of frequent occurrence. This department the Captain took expressly into his own hands; and the observation escaped Edward, that a case of this kind had made a very singular epoch in the life of his friend. The latter made no reply, but seemed to be trying to escape from a painful recollection. Edward immediately stopped; and Charlotte, who, as well as he, had a general knowledge of the story, took no notice of the expression.

"These preparations are all exceedingly valuable," said the Captain, one evening. "Now, however, we have not got the one thing which is most essential—a sensible man who understands how to manage it all. I know an army surgeon, whom I could exactly recommend for the place. You might get him this moment on easy terms. He is highly distinguished in his profession, and has frequently done more for me, in the treatmens even of violent inward disorders, than celebrated physicians. Help upon the spot, is the thing you often most want in the country.

He was written for at once; and Edward and Charlotte were rejoiced to have found so good and necessary an object, on which to expend to much of the money which they set apart for such accidental demands upon them.

Thus Charlotte, too, found means of making use, for her purposes, of the Gap- [illegible] she began to be quite reconciled to his presence, and to feel easy about any consequences which might ensue. She commonly prepared questions to ask him; among other things, it was one of her anxieties to provide against whatever was prejudicial to health and comfort, against poisons and such like. The lead glazing on the china, the verdigris which formed about her copper and bronze vessels &c., had long been a trouble to her. She got him to tell her about these, and, naturally, they often had to fall back on the first elements of medicine and chemistry.

An accident, but welcome occasion for entertainment of this kind, was given by an inclination of Edward to read aloud. He had a particulorly clear, deep voice, and earlier in life had earned himself a pleasant reputation for his feeling and lively recitations of works of poetry and oratory. At this time he was occupied with other subjects, and the books which, for some time past, he had been reading, were eiher chemical, or on some other branch of natural or technical science.

One of his especial curiosities—which, by-the-bye, he very likely shares with a number of his fellow-creatures—was, that he could not bear any one looking over him when he was reading. In early life, when he used to read poems, plays and stories, this had been the natural consequence of the desire which the reader feels, like the poet, or the actor, or the story-teller, to make surprises, to pause, to excite expectation; and this sort of effect was naturally defeated when a third person's eyes could run on before him, and see what was coming. On such occasions, therefore, ho was accustomed to place himself in such a position that no one could get behind him. With a party of only three, this was unnecessary; and as with the present subject there was no opportunity for exciting feelings or giving the imagination a surprise, he did not take any particular pains to protect himself.

One evening he had placed himself carelessly, and Charlotte happened by accident to cast her eyes upon the page His old impatience was aroused; he turned to her, and said, almost unkindly:

"I do wish, once for all, you would leave off doing a thing so out of taste and so disagreeable. When I read aloud to a person, is it not the same as if I was telling him something by word or mouth? The written, the printed word, is in the place of my own thoughts, of my own heart. If a window were broken into my brain or heart, and if the man to whom I am counting out my thoughts, or delivering my sentiments, one by one, knew already beforehand exactly what was to come out of me, should I take the trouble to put them into words? When anybody looks over my book, I always feel as if I were being turn-ed two."

MR. ADAMS' EULOGY ON SEWARD.

The warmth of feeling with which Mr. Adams depicts the character and services of his deceased friend, Mr. Seward, is creditable alike to the earnestness and tenacity of his affection. Long associated, and therefore intimately acquainted, with the subject of his panegyric, he was enabled to look behind those prejudices which are apt to gather in the public mind during the active career of a statesman, and thereby form a more accurate judgment than others of his real qualities of mind and heart. We have nothing to say, consequently, of Mr. Adams' estimate of the eminent Secretary, which we confess does not entirely coincide with our own, but a word, we think, is due to the truth of history in regard to one point which does not so much concern individual character as it does that of the nation.

In his description of the political campaign of 1860-61, and of the disappointment it was to the friends of Mr. Seward that he was not nominated as the Republican candidate by the convention at Chicago, Mr. Adams hardly does justice to the circumstances. He says that Mr. Seward, by his long service and prominence in the public councils, and by his experience in various minor offices, was so clearly entitled to the nomination that his failure recalled Jacques moralizing on man's ingratitude, and the fate of Aristides. Barnevelde, and the two Dewitts. He thus ascribes the result to causes not creditable to our history, if they actually prevailed, and which would go far to discredit the principles of republican government in the eyes of other nations and of time. His words are these:—

The older statesmen of great note had vanished, so as to make his party prominence more marked than ever. As a consequence when the nominating convention assembled at Chicago, the eyes of all were turned towards him as the candidate of all others the most distinguished. A large plurality had been chosen as delegates friendly to him, and the general expectation was that he would be nominated at once. But it was remembered that, in 1844, Henry Clay was defeated because he had a long record of public service, from which many marked sayings and doings might be quoted to affect impressible waverers, and James K. Polk was elected because nobody could quote anything against him, for the reason that he had never said or done anything worth quoting at all. Furthermore, the ghosts of the higher law and of the irrepressible conflict flitted about to alarm excited imaginations.

Last but not least came in the element of bargain and management manipulated by adepts at intrigue, which is almost inseparable from similar assemblies. The effect of all these influences united was to turn the tide at last, and Mr. Seward, the veteran champion of the reforming policy, was set aside in favor of a gentleman as little known by anything he had ever done as the most sanguine friend of such a selection could desire. The is beyond contradiction that no person ever before nominated, with any reasonable probability of success, had had so little of public service to show for his reward.

It cannot be doubted, as Mr. Adams represents, that there were intrigue and bargain in the Chicago Convention; for it is the detestable feature of such gatherings. One of the most skillful dabblers in corruption known to our history was there to trade away the vote of Pennsylvania, and the report at the time was that others of like character were on hand from Indiana; they did what they could, not to defeat Mr Seward, or any other particular candidate, but to make as advantageous a barter of their votes as they might in view of their own future successes; and if they ultimately sided with Mr. Lincoln it was partly because Mr. Lincoln's friends were readier to promise than those of Mr. Chase, Mr. Bates, Mr. Lean, Mr. Dayton, and Mr. Seward; but chiefly because the traders had had the sagacity to discover that Mr. Lincoln was really the strongest candidate. After the first and second votes in the convention, which stood for Seward 173½ and Lincoln 102, then for Seward 184 and Lincoln 181, it became apparent to many besides the traders that Lincoln was the coming man.

These bargainings, however, were not the real causes of Seward's defeat, which were two, namely, that his name was identified with a branch of the Republican party in this State, connected by public sentiment with the most flagrant corruption both in principle and practice; and, secondly, that Mr. Seward himself was suspected, either through ambition or want of nerve, of having weakened in his anti slavery convinctions. The first cause alienated from him a considerable number of old Whigs and Free-soil Democrats, who, while they did not impute venality to Mr. Seward himself, felt that he was in the hands of a cable that really laid the basis of those peculiar kinds of legislation which have since been called Tweedism; and the second cause lost him the confidence of the anti-slavery reformers, who believed, rightly or wrongly, that he was coquetting with the slaveholding managers—a belief which his famous compromise speech in the Senate went far to confirm.

Our recollections of the prevalent feeling in 1850-1 do not coincide with those of Mr. Adams. At least, in this city and State, the opinion among those with whom politics is a duty, and not a pursuit, was that Mr. Seward co-operated with the expedientists' wing of the party rather than with the wing of principle, and that his success in the nomination would have contributed, even in spite of himself, to the invigoration of two classes of schemers—the Union savers and the speculators—at that time active, but not very acceptable to those who had fought the double battle against slavery in the Federal sphere, and against partial legislation in the States. Mr. Chase, Mr. McLean, Mr. Dayton, Mr. Collamer, and even Mr. Bates, were regarded by that class as preferable, for these reasons, to Mr. Seward.

Mr. Adams is wrong, then, in attributing the result at Chicago to sinister and improper influences wholly; and he is no less wrong in his depreciation of Mr. Lincoln's claims. By the scholastic and bureaucratic standard, Mr. Lincoln was far inferior to almost any one of the distinguished gentlemen who were his competitors; but by the popular standard—his peculiar fitness for the emergency—he was, as we think events have proved, their superior; whilst his career completely justifies the discernment of the popular instinct.—New York Evening Post.

On Originality.

Scribner's, for May, says: One does feel sometimes, if one writes, that there is nothing left in the world to be original about; that pretty much everything has been said, sung, described. The cyclical theory is a dreadful nightmare. And to think of Livingstone's finding in the very heart of Africa just the same sort of a bird trap that civilizd American boys catch chippies with. Given, a human being—and everything is included. You get you original idea down to its simplest statement, and there is nothing left but some proverb, familiar as household words. One doesn't know whether to be flattered or annoyed; but if one does strike off something really original—something that one may be morally, if not statistically, certain cannot be found in the ancients—he is sure to read it next day in the President's inaugural or George Elliot's latest novel. These columns of choice extracts from the best writers, new and old, which are getting to be more in vogue in journalism—are more harrassing than any special class of reading to a person who imagines that he has a patent on any one idea, or group of ideas. But doubtless one should congratulate one's self that the seed of truth is sure to struggle to the light through every soil; that deep drainings does not necessarily help, nor do superphosphates hinder it. This is the view I myself am inclined to take. If Shakspeare happens to say the same thing that I do, let me not be ignobly jealous. Rather, let the race receive my congratulations.

High Prices at the Exposition.

The prospect held out to the Viennese of having sixty thousand guests or more quartered on them at a time seems to have turned all heads in the gay capital on the Danube. The most absurdly speculative prices are being asked and given for houses available to be let out in detail to the expected strangers. The local humorist who fills the place, after a very mild fashion, of the London Punch, caricatures the present rage for letting in the following terms: "To visitors to the World's Exposition. A cheap lodging to be had, without bed room or sitting room, at £10 per week for the term of the Exhibition. Lights and water to be paid for extra. Clothes brushing and attendance according to special agreement. Douceurs (trinkgeld) a separate charge, but not to be less than 4s. a day. Information may be had by personal inquiry of the housekeeper; fee, 10s." It seems that the Viennese bakers have already reduced the dimensions of the breakfast roll in forethought for the coming visitors; and another caricaturist portrays their greed in a sketch which represents the favorite semmel, the invariable accompainment of the morning coffee, so shrunk as to be served with ease through the key-hole of the seller's shop to a late customer.

A SCHOOL boy being asked by his teacher how he should flog him, replied: "If you please, sir, I should like to have it upon the Italian system of penmanship, the heavy strokes upward and the down ones light."

Friday Morning, May 9, 1873.

THE VINDICATION OF PHELPS, DODGE & CO.

William E. Dodge, the senior member of the firm of Phelps, Dodge & Co., has been recently unanimously elected by the New York Chamber of Commerce, as its President, mainly for the purpose of vindicating his character from the suspicions cast upon it by the technically false invoices of the above firm, of which so much has been said and written. In the statement made by the firm they acknowledge to having committed a technical fraud that subjects them to the penalty of the law, which is severe, but they assert that they did no intentional wrong, and made only a few hundred dollars by the so called fraud. In order, however, to effect a compromise, they confessed guilt and paid the Government $271,017 27 of which one half went into the treasury, one fourth to the informer and the rest to pay the District Attorney and other expenses. Their statement of the case is plausible and the hitherto honorable and honest business transactions of the firm, give additional weight to their story. Such being the case, the course which the Secretary of the treasury pursued seems harsh in forcing the firm to pay a penalty of over one-fourth of a million dollars for an irregularity that, under the complicated revenue laws, was almost excusable, and that only caused a loss to the Government of some $1,600 at most, and especially is this the case since, the law expressly gave to the Secretary discretionary power to meet emergencies of this nature where no intention of fraud exists. Mr. Dodge said in his speech accepting the position of President of the Chamber of Commerce, that since "we (the firm) have fully understood the case, we have continually to regret ever having paid a dollar to compromise the difficulty." Being innocent, this was their greatest error. No matter if the laws were oppressive and had entangled them, and they were surrounded by informers, spies and greedy officials, by compromising the affair and paying over such a large amount of money to do it, confirmed people in the belief that the firm had acted badly.

The merchants, who compose the Chamber of Commerce, side with the firm against the Government, and have passed a resolution instructing one of its committees to recommend "such alterations of the existing laws as will protect the honest importer from the forfeitures and fines which should fall only upon those who are dishonest and unscrupulous." If the case of this firm tends to enlighten the public in regard to the imperfections of the revenue laws, the incentives which they offer to rascality and the atmosphere of suspicion and secrecy that they cause, in place of confidence and good feeling, some good will result therefrom. The vindication of the firm has also partially prevented the evil effects upon the community that would have resulted by the establishment of their guilt. William E. Dodge has been a conspicuous example of a fine christian gentleman, and the fall of so eminent a man in piety would have been a severe blow to the church of which he was a member and the religion which he professed.

THE Vienna Exposition seems to be a great affair and promises to be a great success notwithstanding some delays and annoyances. It denotes that the Austrian Empire has taken a step forward in the path of progress, and marks a new era in her history. A few years ago Austria was the dominant military power of Europe, her army was the largest, best disciplined, and the most powerful on the continent, but the French and the Italians humbled her, and the German's crushed her, and to-day she triumphs, not in the science of war, but in the arts of peace. There was no display of military power at the opening of the exhibition. Royalty was there in gorgeous display, Queens and Princes graced the occasion with their presence and beauty, but the military pageant of twenty years ago was not there. Austria is no longer immovable a despotism of fear, she is rehabilitated and marches forward to take her place in the new order of events. The speech of the Archduke Charles to the Emperor, was indicative of the better part that Austria has chosen for herself, for he declared that the exhibition "now draws upon Austria the eyes of the world, and has secured for her full recognition of the part she takes in the promotion of the welfare of mankind through the instruction of labor."

Austria, by the great exhibition, teaches the practical lesson of peaceful progress through culture and industry, and marks but the course of her new departure. It is an encouraging sign to behold such universal interest taken in the exhibition, for the great collection of articles there, represent the highest development of skill and the greatest achievements of labor that renews and glorifies the world. The United States ought to have been well represented at Vienna, and perhaps in time will be, but the beginning was disgraceful, and will not tend to elevate our public service in the estimation of Emperors. We refer of course to the United States Commissioners, and not to those sent out by our own State, from whom we expect to hear a good report.

CHEAP FREIGHTS.

The subject of cheaper transportation between the East and West, is occupying a great deal attention and promises to be, possibly, a leading political question. It is being discussed by all the influential papers, and viewed in many ways with various conclusions.

The Republican party has always been in favor of internal improvements, and General Grant has taken the lead already in regard to this special improvement by his recommendations to Congress and the report next winter of the committee, now having the subject under investigation, will no doubt add interest to and throw additional light upon the matter. The great manufacturing and farming interests of the country demand better and cheaper facilities of mutual exchange of products.

Various means have been suggested to accomplish this, but transportation both by water and railway is likely to be necessary. It is thought by some that the only real and permanent relief that can be obtained is through the Federal Government by the exercise of those powers under the constitution for managing the postal business, for regulating commerce between the States, and for making military roads for facility of communication.

If the Government would construct double tracks for freight trains alone, make them as nearly straight as possible, and narrow gauge, and at first only between prominent points, and allow private trains to pass over these tracks at moderate speed, subject to toll, a continuous stream of freight cars could thus be run each way at the same time, with little detention and risk, and it would seem at much less cost than is charged for the same at present rates. Straight lines from either St. Louis or Chicago would probably pass through Pittsburgh to reach New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. We believe the day is not far distant when some such improvement as that suggested will not only be undertaken, but carried through successfully. The necessity for it is now urgent, and in our opinion, will soon be imperative.

STUPID AS USUAL.

Hon. John McGinnis, ex-member of the Legislature, has been appointed Bank Assessor in the city of Philadelphia. His appointment is a fitting recognition of the Democratic element which aided in smashing up the Buckalew-Greeley machine last fall. It is acceptable in Philadelphia, but of course don't go down well with the Argus or the Greeley gang generally—as will be seen by an examination of the lucubrations of the lonely reformer of the Argus this week.

The Argus attacks Governor Hartranft for the appointment. It is nothing to blush for, but with its usual stupidity the Argus has aimed at the wrong mark. Bank Assessors are appointed by the State Treasurer and Auditor General, and Governor Hartranft had as much to do with the appointment as the Argus chap, and no more.

ALFRED R. MOORE, ESQ., of Tidioute, is announced as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Assembly in Warren county. Mr. Moore is a native of this county, a son of Hon. Robert Moore, formerly member of Congress from this district, and a brother-in-law of Judge Agnew, of the Supreme Bench. He is well known and highly respected here, where he has filled various official positions with much credit to himself and acceptability to the public. If the Republicans of Warren county are seeking a representative who, to an unflinching devotion to the principles of their party, adds brains, character and unimpeachable integrity, they will find their man in Mr. Moore. He has our best wishes for his success.

OUR Republican readers will notice in an other column that the Republican Executive Committee has prepared an Amendment to the present popular vote system of nominating candidates, which will be submitted to the Republican voters of the county for rejection or approval on the 31st of May, at the time of holding the primary meetings, for the nomination of candidates.

We desire simply to call attention to the contemplated Amendment now and shall have something further to say in regard to it again.

THE Democratic party is adrift without pilot or compass, and, being known to be unseaworthy, fears are entertained that she will be lost and all on board find watery graves unless something is quickly done to patch up the rotten concern and furnish her a compass, chart and pilot. It is supposed that in diversity of councils there is wisdom, and judging from the tone of our Liberal and Democratic exchanges we should say that there is enough of diversity of opinion in them to evolve wisdom sufficient at any rate to save the sinking craft.

THE steam ship Parthia on which Senators Rutan, Davis and Graham sailed for Europe arrived at Queenstown May the 6th, having been out ten days.

—Mr. A. H. Stevens, of Georgia, says: "The Democratic party must be preserved in its entire integrity—in its principles and its organization; and the trading politicians, claiming to be Democratic leaders, must go to the rear, as their generalship in the last Presidential campaign proved most conclusively that they are neither safe counsellors nor leaders to be trusted."

—Adam Woolever, Esq., late a member of the House of Representatives from Lehigh county, will be a candidate for the State Senate next fall.

—Charles Slaysman of Indiana boro. Indiana county is announced as a candidate for nomination on the Republican ticket for Assembly. L. T. Daniel Ramsey of North Mahonning tp. Indiana county, has already been announced for the same office.

Resolutions complimentary of Governor Hartranft and officers of the committee were adopted.

—State Senator William A. Wallace, of Clearfield, has been elected Vice President of the Southern Pacific Railroad, of which Col. Thomas A. Scott is President. Caldwell, of Gaysport, were elected Senatorial Conferees to meet the other conferees from the other counties in the district to elect a Senatorial Delegate. It was agreed to hold the County Convention on the fourth Monday of May. The proceedings were very harmonious, good feeling prevailed.

—The Ohio Republican Convention meets May 21. It is generally conceded that Governor Noyes will be renominated, with the understanding that he shall be sent to the United States Senate in place of Senator Thurman, and there is consequently considerable rivalry for the Lieutenant Governorship. Among the candidates mentioned are State Senators Brinsmade, Alphonso Hart, and Speaker Van Voorhees.

—Charles Jeremy, Esq., Select Councilman from the Seventh Ward, is a candidate for the Republican nomination for State Senate, in Allegheny county, and he is making a strong canvass of the county. Mr. Jeremy is a staunch Republican, and has a host of friends in his party who will make a determined fight for his success. As the representative of the large and constantly increasing Welsh portion of our population, he will prove a strong competitor in the convention.

—The Republican candidates for nomination for Assembly in Warren county are: J. H. Douglass and Geo. W. Allen of Tidioute and A. R. Moore of Limestone. Mr. Moore was formerly a resident of this place, and has a son H. R. Moore Esq., now practicing law here. He is an honest, capable and worthy citizen, and if the Republicans of Warren place him on their ticket he will certainly bring to it strength, and if elected will make a faithful Representative.

—The Altoona Tribune says; Pursuant to a call of the Chairman, the members of the Blair County Republican Committee met at the Sheriff's office Wednesday morning at ten o'clock, and on the second ballot elected John R. Bohn delegate to the next State Convention, his competitors being D. T. Caldwell and W. H. H. Young, of Tyrone. Messrs. John M. Stonebraker, of Altoona, Jack Caldwell, of Gaysport, and C. S. W. Jones, of Tyrone, were elected Senatorial Conferees. The time for holding the next County Convention, was fixed on Monday, May 26th, 1873.

—The Lebanon Courier says: Judge Butler, of Chester county, and Judge Paxson, of Philadelphia, are prominently named for the Supreme Bench of this State. Years ago they were apprentices together in the Village Record office, at West Chester. They were at the time industrious, studious and ambitious, doing with all their might whatever they found to do. They are now both recognized as among the ablest jurists of the State. Such careers offer a most encouraging example to young men.

—The Republican County Convention of Butler county, which met in Butler on the 29th ult., fixed upon the 7th day of June as the day for holding the Republican primary meetings. The offices to be filled are: Two for Assembly; one for county Treasurer; one for county Commissioner; one for Jury Commissioner; and one for county Auditor. The Committee passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That none but those fully in accord with the Republican party at the last Presidential election shall exercise the right of voting at the said primary elections, and that the different election boards are hereby requested to see that this resolution is enforced.

—The Virginia Democrats propose to hold their State Convention at Lynchburg. The Republicans have already announced the same point as the place at which their convention shall be held. The object of both parties is to avoid the Richmond influence, and cater to the western part of the State.

—Governor Hartranft has recently made the following appointments: John Shiffert, Millerstown, Lehigh county; Daniel S. Von Neida, Ephrata, Lancaster county, and Wm. Rule, Mifflinburg, Union county, to be Notaries Public for the term of three years each.

Robert B. Magee, of Oil City, to be inspector of coal and Petroleum oils for Venango county.

J. Harvey Wheeler, to be sealer of weights and measures for Lycoming county.

—The Republican Committee of Lycoming county met in Williamsport on Saturday, and elected R. M. Foresman, Esq., Senatorial, and Lindsey Mehaffey, Esq., Representative delegate to the State Convention, with power to choose their own conferees. The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the Republican Standing Committee for the county of Lycoming hereby unanimously and heartily endorse the course pursued by the adminstration of Governor J. F. Hartranft, since his inauguration.

—The American and Chester county Advertiser says: The Republicans of Chester county will present to the nominating Convention the name of Hon. William Butler, for the office of Judge of the Supreme Court, but they wish it distinctly understood in advance, that they seek no discreditable alliances to accomplish success. They invite a comparison of his record as a lawyer—as a successful jurist—as well as his character and reputation as a private citizen—with those of other candidates, and if merit and fitness are to be made the touchstones of the Convention in making choice of a candidate, they have no fear of the result.

The Treasury Bill Again.

Governor Hartranft yesterday put the finishing touch on the Mackey-Extension outrage, by signing the bill extending State Treasurer Mackey's term of office a year longer than the time for which he had been legally elected, but which is labelled out of public politeness, "an act providing for an election of a State Treasurer by the people"—at such time in the future as may suit Mr. Mackey's convenience. If the Governor had shown a little of the veto disposition in dealing with this job that he did in a large number of bills where no principle was involved, we could have placed more confidence in his lately professed independence.

The above is from the Lancaster Express of the 29th ult. The Express greatly misstates and probably misunderstands the effect of the actions of Gov. Hartranft. The following is the status:

Prior to the recent Constitutional amendment, the State Treasurer was elected by the Legislature; his term commenced on the first Monday of May.

The law provides that each incumbent of the office should hold for one year or until his successor was duly qualified.

The constitutional amendment adopted in 1872, provided that after its adoption the State Treasurer should be elected by the people at such time and for such term of service as may be prescribed by law.

Mr. Mackey was elected State Treasurer in January 1872, his term commencing upon the first Monday of May, 1872, and continuing until the first Monday of May 1873, and until his successor was elected and qualified.

When the Legislature of 1873 assembled, Mr. Mackey was the only candidate for the Treasury, and his election was assured. But it was the opinion of the best lawyers of the Commonwealth, that the amendment of 1872 was already operative, and that a legislative election would be unconstitutional. No election was held—and the act of 28th of April, 1873, was passed in pursuance of the constitutional amendment.

It provides that the Treasurer shall be elected at the same time that other State officers are elected, that his term of office shall be two years, and commence at the date at which it has heretofore commenced. It provided (which was unnecessary) that Mr. Mackey shall continue in office until the Treasurer elected by the people was inducted. It provided further that Mr. Mackey should give bond in $500,000, on or before the 5th inst., for the custody of the public funds during the interregnum.

It gave Mr. Mackey the term which the Legislature would have given him in January but for the constitutional doubt, and that term only.

Gov. Hartranft had either to approve the bill, or to withold his signature until next January, and then veto it.

The consequence of his failure to sign it before the first Monday of the present month, would have been to relieve Mr. Mackey, of his obligation to file a new bond, and to give him absolute control of the State funds without security, unless his former bond is held to cover the extension of his term. The effect of his absolute refusal to sign it, would be to continue Mr. Mackey in office, indefinitely, or until a bill was passed by the Legislature, of a character which the Governor would approve. In other words, Mr. Mackey would remain in office just so long as he could induce the Legislature to refuse to pass, or Gov. Hartranft to refuse to sign a bill for the election of his successor.

It is not likely that Mr. Mackey would have objected to a veto of the bill, but why the Express and Mackey should for once jump together in judgment, is not immediately perceptible.—State Journal.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Weather Bureau—Science of Meteorology—The Storm Signal Bureau—How Storms are Predicted—Back Pay, &c.

Correspondence of the Radical.

WASHINGTON, D. C. May 6, 1873.

The three most capricious and fickle things in all nature have been thought heretofore to be, first, human actions in general; second, woman's love in particular, and third, the weather. Such phrases as "the uncertainty of human affairs," "as fickle as a woman," "as changeable as the wind," have always been used to express the most superlative degree of capriciousness. But the ingenuity of men's minds has moved them to attempt to found science upon, at least, the first and last named particulars. Our happiness depends upon these things to a very great extent, and it is well that we should know as much about them as is possible to be known.

The human mind has always been a very great mystery to itself, one of the most mysterious things in all nature. Thinking men, ever prying into nature's secrets, have attempted to learn something concerning the laws of this mysterious something—for scientific men believe in universal laws,—and the result has been the founding of the Science of Psychology, and, as a necessary corrollary, the twin Science of Sociology, both yet in their infancy, yet presenting a field for immense original research and destined to accomplish great things and to add great treasures to our stores of knowledge.

Comparatively nothing (I might strike out the word comparatively and still be right) is known of the laws relating to feminine affection. It would be very foolish to assert that there exist no such laws. Science tells us that everything is regulated by unchanging, immutable law, and we have no more right to assert that the female heart is any exception. Woman's love can no more change without a cause than can the sun change his course through the heavens without a cause.

But, we are having the Weather Bureau under consideration and are not now concerned with the question of female affections. The science of Meteorology has been studied ever since the peopleing of the world by man. Everybody studies it. Everybody attempts to predict changes of weather. We have all manner of signs to denote rain, or clear, or cold, or warm weather. Who has not heard so many old sayings concerning the changes of the moon, the "light and dark of the moon," the significance of the appearance of corn husks, that he finds how impossible it is for "one head to contain it all?" Even the "groundhog story" is thought enough of to be repeated every year by almost everybody.

All such methods of predicting the weather have proved to be unreliable, and because they have proved useless many suppose that the thing is impossible. Many persons have no faith in Weather Bureaus, or any other institutions established for such purposes. Nevertheless, the science of Meteorology is making rapid strides forward, and there will come a time in the remote future when storms will be foretold with the same precision as eclipses and the appearance of comets are now predicted.

The Storm Signal Bureau of the United States is doing much towards the solution of this problem. General A. J. Myer has charge of it, and, though it has been established but a few years, its importance is being recognized throughout the whole civilized world. It is refreshing to read the many words of praise bestowed upon this American institution by some of the wisest men in Europe. They candidly admit that we do these things better in this country than they are yet able to do. One reason for this is that we have a larger extent of territory from which to make our observations.

Many persons will ask the question "How can they tell?" The process is a simple one. A number of stations are established in various parts of the country where the direction and the velocity of the winds, the condition of the thermometer and the barometer are registered, and the same telegraphed to the Bureau in this city. From these reports the directions of currents and storms are tabulated and, as it is found these move with uniform exactness, a storm in one locality to day may be supposed to be in another to-morrow. All the machinery for registering these observations is self-acting and so delicately adjusted as to permit of no mistakes being made. With the present knowledge of the law governing the changes of the weather predictions can not be made with any certainty for a longer period than one or two days.

That the community has been and is to be immensely benefitted by this institution is certain. The experiment has been made and is a success. It is likely that its benefits will be soon extended to those who need them most, the farmers of the country. Ship owners and sailors now consult "old probabilities" before putting out to sea, and it is impossible to estimate the number of ships and lives that have been saved by being forewarned of coming storms.

A very convenient and inexpensive system of extending the advantages of this institution may be found in providing flags and lights of different colors to be used by the people themselves. For instance let a red flag represent a coming rain storm, a blue flag coming cold weather, a white flag clear weather, and a green ag warm weather. When the reports of he Bureau indicate the approach of any articular kind of weather let the signal tation hoist the appropriate flag on some minence from whence it can be seen for long distance. Then let those in view lo the same. This gives the information o a considerable extent of territory. Then those more remote can follow the xample, and so on, till the entire country will be informed as to the kind of weath- r they may expect. A plan something like this is, perhaps, the only one that can be adopted whereby the whole people can be benefitted. But, whatever method may be decided upon, something of the kind will be done whenever sufficient practical tests have been made.

BACK PAY.

The history of the disposition made of the money in the matter of the "salary steal" would be very interesting if it could be known. The pay clerks of the Senate and House are not at all communicative on this subject, however, and we get our information by piece-meal, as it happens to leak out. It is safe to say that much the larger number of the honorable members of both branches of Congress have drawn their respective shares, and in most cases it is to be supposed they intend to keep them. Once in a while we hear of some conscientious gentleman who refuses to have anything to do with it. In some cases their consciences do not trouble them until sometime after having drawn their shares. This operation of the consciences affects different men in different ways. Some return it to the Treasury; others present it to schools, orphan asylums, churches, and benevolent institutions of some kind or other, that is, they "put it where it will (in their opinion) do the most good."

Mr. Cox, of New York, has caused his share ($4,812) to be returned to the Treasury. It was forwarded by his brother-in-law, acting as his agent, who, in a note to Treasurer Spinner, stated that Mr. Cox had opposed that clause of the bill, and "desired to make his opposition to the measure emphatic by this disposition of the money." Queer, isn't it, that he should not have thought of that when he drew it about two months ago? Emphatic, very!

Mr. Garfield is out in a letter to his constituents justifying his action in voting for the increase. One of his arguments, which will strike most people as somewhat peculiar, is that President Grant did not veto the bill. A rather strange method of reasoning upon the moral quality of his own act.

Senator Sumner has adopted a method that lifts him clear above all suspicion. The other day, when he visited the pay clerk to draw his salary for the last session, he was informed that the sum of $4,444 was credited to him as back pay. He immediately sat down and wrote a note directing the Secretary of the Senate to turn the amount into the Treasury. His hands are clean.

Mr. Shellabarger, of Ohio, drew his share and announces his intention of keeping it. He says he thinks he is legally entitled to it, that he has earned it, and that he has a number of precedents for the act. Mr. Shellabarger has recently accepted an appointment as member of the Civil Service Advisory Board. Will he favor a similar principle of increasing the salaries of other public servants? He is one of the few politicians who have borne through a long public life an unsullied reputation for honesty. If he had taken a different position on this back salary question it would have been worth much more than five thousand dollars to him.

Public opinion is almost universally opposed to this measure. Occasionally we see an article justifying it. It is certainly right and proper that the government should pay its servants salaries sufficient to attract the best men, and to enable them to live in comfort. These are the only arguments that have been or can be urged in favor of increasing the salaries of public officials. But salaries that will attract good men will attract bad men still more, and there is an end to that argument. As to living in comfort it will be difficult to make our people who do the voting believe that five thousand dollars is an insufficient sum for that purpose. If some of our honest farmers could come here to Washington and witness the manner of living among our public men they would not like to hear anything more about insufficient salaries. It would open their eyes to see how the bland, genial Mr. ——— carries himself when he gets to Washington. They would learn that the man who was once a candidate is transformed into another sort of being when he becomes a Congrsesman. Let such a person attend a reception given by the "Member from his deestrict," and then let him tell what he thinks of having awnings across the sidewalk to shelter visitors in passing from their carriages to the door. Let him tell what he thinks of having Brussels carpet laid across the sidewalk to keep dry and clean the satin slippers of the honorable official's daughter, while his own daughter goes out every morning with heavy boots and sun-bonnet to milk the cows without thinking of protection from the weather. And then let him tell if he doesn't think his own ruddy-cheeked, bright-eyed girl is not just as good as the pale, delicate daughter of the honorable member of Congress, or other official. Ask him if he wants his money voted away that other men and their families may live in fine style and enjoy luxuries that he can never expect for himself and his loved ones.

As the purchase of a Sewing Machine is of may be an act for a life-time, care should be taken in selecting one that time and use have proven to be the best. Time tries all things. "Use only furnishes the final test." Opinions of the skillful may be of value, but time is needed to confirm them. While the Singer Sewing Machine Company has given the public the finest fruits of inventive genius, they have guarded it from a multitude of traps. Attachments have been added for various purposes, but it has kept free from all useless complications. Simplicity of parts, and adaptation to the widest range of work has been the constant aim.

Instead of boasting of a variety of useless stitches and movements, it claims to make but One Kind of Stitch, and that with the Fewest Movements Possible. Hence the Machine may run constantly for twenty years, or a life-time, and work just as well as when new.

The Greensburg Tribune and Herald says: THE BEAVER RADICAL, established in 1868, by Col. M. S. Quay, is one of the best weekly papers in the State. Col. Quay severed his connection with it, as editor and proprietor, last December, and Senator Rutan became the proprietor. From a recent issue we find that it has changed hands again by Senator Rutan severing his connection with it. Notwithstanding these recent changes, the character of the paper remains unchanged; hence, we conclude that Mr. Curtis has, in reality, been the actual editor all the time.

The funeral sermon of the late Rev. D. P. Lowary will be preached in the Beaver Presbyterian Church, Sabbath evening May 11th, 1873, by Rev. Kerr, D. D. All are cordially invited to be present on the occasion.

At a meeting of the Republican Executive Committee on Wednesday, the following important resolutions were adopted which provides for a change in our system of nominating candidates. The resolutions explain themselves and to their consideration we ask the careful attention of Republicans so that they can act upon the matter intelligently at the primary meetings on the 31st inst.

WHEREAS, The present system of making nominations is believed to be unsatisfactory to a majority of Republican voters of the county, because fraught with manifest injury to the party by concentrating too much power in the larger boroughs, enabling candidates, in some instances, to secure a nomination by a small plurality vote of the county electors, and

WHEREAS, It is right and proper that the Republican voters of the county should express by their ballots, their approval of this contemplated change in making nominations before it shall take effect, therefore

Resolved, That we submit to a vote of the party at the primary elections on the 31st, inst., the following amendment, which, if approved, shall take effect in the nominating convention of 1874, viz: "That in case no one candidate shall receive a majority of all the votes cast, then the nomination for said office shall be made by the convention.

Resolved, That the requsite number of tickets be printed and distributed for the amendment and against the amendment respectively, and the tickets balloted be counted, and return made in accordance with the rules of the party governing the nomination of candidates.

Resolved, That the foregoing proceedings be published in the Republican papers of the county.

We are in receipt of The Republic for May, and it is richly freighted with contents. The opening article discusses the question, "Shall the Republican party live?" and in answering the question makes the support of the party to be equivalent to a support of the welfare and prosperity of the whole country. "The farmers' Movement Against Railway Opposition" is an interesting article that furnishes much food for reflection and is worthy of careful perusal. Other articles on the "The Government's Indian Policy," "Japan," "The Fisheries," The Forty-third Congress," "An old enemy under a new name," "Number of Male and Females in the United States," "Frederick Douglas," "Living within one's means," "A word about Statesmanship," are first class. We shall endeavor to furnish our readers with extracts from this able review, published at Washington, D. C:

Obituary.—E. P. Kuhn, Esq., of this place after a short illness died early on Sunday morning, in the 35th year of his age. Mr. Kuhn was afflicted with "Bright's disease of the Kidneys" said to be incurable, and although he had the benefit of the best medical skill, he was a doomed man from the first and no help could save him. His funeral was very largely attended, the several orders of which he was a member being represented by large delegations from the various lodges in the county. The whole community mourn his untimely fate and realize that in his death is lost a good citizen, neighbor and friend. Mr. Kuhn was generous, genial, and ever ready to help a friend in need. Professionally he stood fair with his brethren of the Bar and gave promise of better attainments in his practice than he had yet accomplished. All who knew him respected him and a very large circle of acquaintances lament his death.

Pickwick.—Pickwick! glorious old Pickwick! Jolly, kind, impulsive Pickwick! Let us grasp you by the hand again as of old, when we first made your acquaintance; when the tears rolled down our cheeks for very laughter at the mishaps of yourself and Messrs. Winkle, Snodgrass and Tupman. We can see you yet standing upon your chair, with one hand under your coat tails, the other extended over the table, addressing the "Pickwickians," while upon the members' faces we see admiration, respect and love for the great and glorious leader.

A person's heart must be cold indeed that is not warmed after reading the haps and mishaps of the Pickwick Club abroad. Of Sam Weller, Jingle, Mrs. Bardell, the Wardle, the Fat Boy—"Damn that boy, he's asleep again!"—the scene in the Justice's office, the election of a new member; in short the whole work teems with the very quintescence of humor, and deserves to be read by every man, woman and child on the face of the continent. A great many people will not read Dickens' because at one time he made some sport of Americans in one of his works, after being feted and received in the country as no other author had been before. But have we Americans not caricatured and held up the English, as a laughing stock in our papers and books for years? Beside this, Dickens made ample amends to the American people in after years, therefore this should not deter us from reading his sublime creations; and I would say to all, young and old, put way those trashy weeklies—RADICAL excepted—and dime novels, and commence reading the works of Charles Dickens, beginning with the Pickwick Papers, and take my word for it you will not stop until you have read them all; while at the same time you will be storing your brain with useful knowledge, wit and wisdom. MRS. BARDELL.

Received a Call.—The Greeneville Advance says: The U. P. congregation of Steubenville, Ohio, have unanimously tendered a call to Rev. J. R. Brittain, of this place to become their pastor, naming at the same time $2,200 per annum as a compensation in case of acceptance. Whether or not the call will be accepted by him we cannot say. Of one thing we feel certain, the U. P. congregation of this place will do everything in their power which they may deem consistent with duty to retain him in his present position as their pastor. The above action of the Steubenville congregation was a complete surprise to Rev. B. inasmuch as he knew nothing from them of their intention till waited on by a duly constituted committee on Friday evening last.

Rev. Daniel Macfie, formerly from Edinburgh, Scotland, has been preaching for two weeks at Mill Creek Presbyterian Church, near Hookstown, and his labors being highly appreciated, the congregation have engaged his services for the next three months.

E. P. Kuhn, Esq.—On Tuesday last shortly before the funeral of the late E. P. Kuhn, Esq., the members of the bar of Beaver county assembled at the Court House to take action with respect to the death of the gentleman named. Hon. B. B. Chamberlin was called to the chair and John J. Wickham, Esq., chosen Secretary. After some befitting remarks from the Chairman and others, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It is with sincere regret that we have learned of the untimely death of our professional brother, E. P. Kuhn, Esq.,

Resolved, That as a mark of respect to his memory the members of the bar present at this meeting attend his funeral in a body.

On motion, the Chairman was authorized to appoint a committee for the purpose of preparing appropriate resolutions of respect, to be submitted to a subsequent meeting which was fixed for June 7th, 1873, at two o'clock, P. M. The meeting thereupon adjourned until that time.

Decoration Day.—The following General Order has been issued in regard to the observance of Memorial Day. This matter should receive the immediate attention of our citizens, and suitable action taken to ensure the performance of the proper and appropriate ceremonies of decorating the graves of our fallen heroes:

HEAD'QRS G. A. R., DEPARTMENT OF PA., No. 148 CHESTNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA, April 23, 1873.

General Orders, No. 37.

In accordance with our rules and regulations, Friday, May 30th, will be observed as a Memorial Day for the purpose of strewing with flowers, or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defence of their country during the late rebellion, or who have since passed away. Citizens generally, military and civic associations, churches and Sunday-schools should be invited to participate, and in places where there are no posts of of the Grand Army, it is hoped that the citizens will join together for this purpose, that fitting services may be held in every churchyard and cemetery where our dead heroes sleep.

The manner of conducting these services is optional with Posts, but those desiring it, can obtain copies of the form of ceremonies, as furnished last year by making immediate application to A. A. G.

Attention is especially invited at this time to the recommendation from the National Headquarters last year, "that flowers and shrubs be planted at each grave, in order that when we are gone, the seasons, in their ceaseless round, may in our stead, adorn the sleeping places of our comrades. Medical Blunders.

From the period when surgeons applied their salves to weapons instead of wounds to the present wide-awake age, the medical profession has often unwittingly taken side with Disease in its conflicts with the human system. Even yet, in spite of the teachings of centuries of experience, some physicians believe in depleting their patients, already seriously exhausted by sickness, with powerful evacuants, emetics, salivants, cantharidal plasters, or the lancet. But, providentially, public intelligence is ahead of these medical fossils, who belong, of right, to the era of the Crusades! That powerful ally of nature in its warfare with the causes of sickness, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, has opened the eyes of the masses to the paramount importance of increasing the vital strength of the body when menaced by disease. They understand that when the atmospheric conditions are adverse to health, it is wise to reinforce the system with a wholesome tonic and stimulant, and thus enable it to combat and repel the depressing influence of an inclement temperature. If the constitutional and animal powers were always thus recruited in the presence of danger, the mortality from consumption, bronchitis, chronic rheumatism, &c., would be much less than it is now. The causes which produce croups, colds, quinsey, diptheria and catarrh seldom affect a strong and active vital system; and of all vitalizing preparations, Hostetter's Bitters has proved the most efficient. It is not claimed that this standard tonic is a specific for lung and throat maladies, as it is for dyspepsia, liver complaint and intermitents, but it is unhesitatingly asserted that it is the best known safeguard against all the atmospheric elements of disease may2-1m

HISTORY OF THE BEAVER VALLEY.

Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.

BEAVER VALLEY, April, 1873.

[Paper No. 9.]

ROCHESTER.

Rochester is the youngest town in Beaver Valley, having its existence as a town only about forty years. Its history is not connected with any of the early incidents, for which its neighbors are famous. It is singular why it was overlooked so long, and why it was not the first river town at the mouth of the Beaver. In every point it is superior as a place for business, to either Bridgewater or Beaver, having an unlimited capacity for wharfage and advantageous locations for manufactories and business houses. Its life has been an exciting one, fully as much so as any other settlement in the Beaver Valley. No western town ever saw more exciting land speculations or wilder financial undertakings, than have been here wittnessed. Although the history of the town does not run back into that of the aboriginals, or to that of the pioneers who first laid claim to the lands in and around it; yet many scenes of interest have transpired on the soil and made it memorable and of interest to those who have been permitted to hear the stories and thrilling adventures of the good old fathers.

The "Academy Outlots" were located in a portion of what is now Rochester, running to its lower or eastern boundary. Connected with these outlots, there is much that is very interesting, but it is now too late to gather any creditable account of the events that transpired back at that time. The fathers are gone, and with them has been lost a great deal of valuable reminiscences. Tradition gives us something once in a while, but too unreliable and uncertain to relate here. The town was a part of New Sewickly township until the year 1832. During the period preceding that date, there were built on the flat and steppes forming the present borough, about twenty houses at the time the first lots were surveyed and run off. Some boat building was done by Samuel Moore as early as 1825. The family of Moores were among the earliest settlers in Beaver Valley, and this gentleman constructed keelboats for use on the lower waters, doing a fair business at that time. This would seem to be the first industry in Rochester, or its present limits, and the adaptability of the location, and the advantages of the business for the place, were early recognized. Boat building was carried on at a much earlier period on the Beaver above Rochester, probably on account of there being plenty of timber.

The bridge connecting Bridgewater and Rochester was built as early as the year 1814, being a very cheap structure, supported by uprights for piers. It served its purpose and day, however, and met the wants of the people at that time. It was blown down after a while and replaced by one which has a better appearance and more capacity for endurance.

"THE OLDEST INHABITANT."

The town of Rochester came into existence in the year 1832. The first lots laid out on the river seem to have been during that year, by J. A. Sholes, Esq., who is yet residing in a house located on one of the lots. The number of lots comprised all of one-half of one of the outlots, being about four acres. These lots are located on the river bank, not far from where the wharf is built. About this time a saw mill was erected by Mr. Lukens, which was followed not longer after by the car factory, a very extensive building, and which has since been in use as a plow factory. Dating from this period, was the commencement of the manufacturing interests of the town. Another boat yard was put in operation and run for some years. The town now had two good boat yards in successful operation, doing business to their full capacity. During that time, and for some time afterwards, the business was a very extensive one, and brought some degree of prosperity to the people. Business became more active, and a bright future was opening up before the town. Commerce was now being attracted to the place, and in 1834 the first boat landed on its shores and opened a new and continuously increasing business. The boat was named New Castle, probably after the town of that name, on the canal recently built, at the head of the Beaver river, and with which a large trade sprung up. Warehouses were now the order of the day, and the first one was a small building set on the bank by Mr. Sholes in front of his residence.

THE "BOATING" TRADE.

Boating became now a thriving business—hundreds of boats yearly passing up and down the river, and landing at Rochester. A report made by the Cincinnati Board of Trade, prior to 1850, shows that 233 different steamboats annually passed up or down the Ohio river, in their trips for Pittsburgh to the lower ports and return, and necessarily all must pass Rochester, any of which could be hailed and made use of for commerce. Of course thousands of trips in all were made by these boats, hundreds of which landed, and received and landed their cargoes. It had become an immense business in the course of a few years, giving employment to scores of persons, and adding very much to the progress of the town. The opening of the canal running to Erie, and connecting with other canals at or near New Castle for other points, created a large and growing trade in this direction. Good outlots were established, by which the town had access to the outer world, and soon became a very prominent point.

In 1835 and 1836, a great impulse was given to the town by the operations of Mr. Ovid Pinney, a gentleman who owned largely of the property of the town, and had an interest in making it successful. Hundreds of acres of ground were laid out in lots and extensively advertised throughout the country. All available property was bought up, and then the greatest efforts were put forth to show the excellent advantages, &c., for the purpose of building up the town. Beaver Valley has never witnessed another such excitement as was thus created. Property ran up to the highest possible pitch, and men became rich—or poor—in a day. This was pushed to the greatest extent, and the property fell into the hands of a New York company. Of course, this state of affairs could not last a great while, and after a time the bubble burst and Rochester assumed a more established base. Strange incidents are narrated in connection with this great speculation, but they should not find place in these letters. The excitement is referred to merely as a historical fact. Other points were more or less affected also, and property sold for unprecedented sums. Rochester became a borough in the year 1859, and started as such with an established reputation as a good business point. During the same year, the present wharf was built for the accommodation of the river traffic. Improvements became much more rapid, and means for the extension of business were made use of. In 1853, the Pittsburgh Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad was compieted through the town, which opened up a new field for its enterprise and added very largely to the business prospects and interests of the town.

ROCHESTER'S OUTLOOK FOR THE FUTURE.

In 1856 the Pittsburgh & Cleveland Railroad was opened for business and opened another scope of country for the entrance of Rochester's business interests. Shortly afterward the road to Erie was also opened, thus giving to the town the outlet by river and rail to Pittsburgh; the river outlet to the lower ports; one railroad leading to the granaries and pasture fields of the great West, and two lines of railroad and two or three canals leading to the great lakes of the north-west. It is not a difficult matter to see what a vast field was here opened up, for the advancement of the material interests of Rochester, and the building up of a large city. With such avenues of trade opened up to her doors, and such a variety of interests presented for the use of the citizens of the borough, is it any wonder that her citizens dreamed and talked of commercial greatness and financial power? It would seem to the observer that the immense trade on the roads leading to the great West were enough to give business prominence to any place of moderate energy. Under the stimulus of the fields of commercial fertility thus placed within the reach of Rochester, it soon became quite a forwarding point. All these roads and canals necessarily touched the town, and from all points of the country goods could be shipped directly to the port and stations within its limits. Merchandise of all kinds found here a place from which it could be shipped to all parts of Beaver county and parts of Butler. In the improvement of its business interests, rapid strides had also been made in building and improving the appearance of the town. The rapid improvements made in the other valley towns had given an impetus to those of Rochester, which, as a matter of course, did not desire to be outdone by its neighbors and rivals. Direct connection was opened between Rochester and the part of the country on the opposite side of the river by a good steam ferry, which was another important addition to the town in the way of directing a large trade from that side of the river, and a considerable travel on the part of the citizens.

Many industries of various kinds were finding a good, substantial footing and remunerative employment was given to scores of workmen, whose cosy little homes soon began to dot the hill sides, and vie with more costly dwellings, in their surroundings of natural beauty. The whole town was alive with the ceaseless activity on the part of the citizens, and every one pronounced it the home of thrift and energy. Attention was being paid to the moral and intellectual wants of the people and every effort was put forth to make the status of the people inferior to none anywhere.

BEAVER.

Perils of Submarine Diving.

Probably no calling necessitates more personal risk than that of the diver. Out of the number of professional divers in the United States, in all thirty or thereabouts, the average yearly mortality is four, though so large a percentage is due more to the recklessness of the men in the face of danger to which they become inured than to a mere accident. The armor consists of body, collar piece, helmet and shoes. The body is composed of one thickness of rubber between two of cloth, and covers the man from his neck to his heels, being closely strapped into the shoes at the bottom, and snugly held about the wrist by rubber cuffs. The helmet looks very much like an immense copper pot, and when put on is connected with the body by means of the collar piece, which fits closely about the shoulders and is fastened to the helmet and the body by thumb screws, rendering it perfectly air-tight. There are glasses at the front and sides of the helmet, the piece in front being constructed to open. This is never closed until the man is ready to descend, when it is tightly screwed up, and from that moment the air pump must never cease working even for a single instant, lest the diver suffocate.

The air forced to him from above reaches him by means of a rubber passing under his left arm, connects with the back of the helmet, the air passing over his head and down in front of his face. The foul air escapes through a small valve in the back of the helmet, and the rapidity with which it goes is regulated by preference of the man in the dress. The shoes are soled with an inch or two of lead, and over the shoulders, slung by cords, are two enormous leaden plates, one on the back and one on the breast, thus giving the diver sufficient weight to descend. A life line is fastened about his waist, by means of which he communicates his wants to those above. One pull of the line signifies more air is needed, two that the pumps are sending him too much and he is liable to float up, and three pulls indicate that he desires to be hauled to the surface. The greatest danger to a diver is, that he may get his air pipe entangled in something, and thus stop his supply of air. A man could not live two minutes should this happen. He usually descends with the hose in one hand and signal in the other, taking good care that these articles remain at a safe distance from any projection of rock or any portion of the wreck he is working upon, before he dares to let go of them to use his hands.

POSTAL CARDS.

The Postmaster General has given notice that the necessary appropriation having been made for the purpose, the Department will, on the first of May next, commence the issue to postmasters of the postal cards authorized by the act of June 8, 1872.

The card adopted is five and one-eighth inches in length and three inches in width, and is made of good, stiff paper, watermarked with the initials, "U. S. P. O. D." in monogram. The face of the cards is engraved, surrounded by a border in scroll work, one-eighth of an inch in width. The one cent stamp printed on the upper right hand corner, is from a profile bust of the Goddess of Liberty looking to the left, and surrounded by a lath work border, with the words, "U. S. Postage" inscribed above, and "one cent" below. On the upper left hand corner are the words, "United States Postal Card," with the directions to "write the address only on this side, the message on the other." Underneath, and occupying the lower half of the cards, are ruled lines, on which to write the address, the top line being prefixed with the work "To.—" The back of the card, intended for the communication, is entirely plain, being devoid of even ruled lines. In color the body of the card is light cream, the printing velvet brown. No variation in shape, size, color, or an other particular will be made from the regular style to accommodate special cases; nor will the Department do any printing on the card beyond the engraving specified in the description.

Postal cards will be sold for one cent each, neither more or less, whether in large quantities or small.

The object of the postal cards is so facilitate letter correspondence and provide for the transmission through the mails, at a reduced rate of postage of short communications either printed or written in pencil or ink. They may therefore be used for orders, invitations, receipts, acknowledgements and other requirements of business and social life, and the matdesired to be convened may be either in writing or in print, or partially in both. In their treatment as mail matter they are to be regarded by the postmasters the same as sealed letters, and not as printed matter, except that in no case will unclaimed cards be sent to the Dead Letter Office.

An ordinary printed business card may be sent through the mails when prepaid by a one cent postage stamp attached; but such cards must contain absolutely no printed matter except the address, otherwise it will be treated as not fully prepaid, and refused admission into the mails.

All cards different from those herein described, bearing embossed or printed postage stamps, and purporting to be United States postal cards, are counterfeit, and the manufacture of such cards or the attempt to use the same will subject the offender to a fine of $500 and imprisonment for five years. (Sec. 178, Postal Code.)

Postmasters will not, under any circumstances, be permitted to reduce or exchange postal cards that may be misdirected, spoiled in printing, or otherwise rendered unfit for use in the hands of private holders.

The Department will not furnish less than five hundred cards on the order of a postmaster. Individuals desiring postal cards will purchase them of a postmaster, as in no case can they obtain them upon their application to the Department.

WE asked a pretty girl the other day to give us a kiss, but she couldn't afford it. She said she would lend us one provided we would return it. We borrowed the article and returned it promptly.

Insures Against all kinds of Accidents.

By paying from $10 to $50 a year, an indemnity of from $5 to $50 a week during disability can be secured in case of any accident by which a man is rendered unable to attend to his usual occupation; and in the event of death by accident the same payments secure from $1000 to $5000 to his family.

To Mechanics, Farmers and other laboring men we especially commend the subject of Accident Insurance. A small sum paid yearly will, in the event of a crushed foot or hand, or finger, a broken leg or arm, or any disabling injury, secure a weekly income of cash sufficient to support your amily until you are able to resume your work.

A little money invested in Life and Accident policies would save many a widow and orphans from misery and starvation.

HOUSE AND FARM.

About Chickens.

Mrs. Mary C. West gives the readers of the Mobile Register some useful hints on the treatment of fowls, drawn from her own experience, and Professor Stelle, the agricultural editor makes comments on some points, which we produce:

I have made up my mind to write you a chapter on chickens; but that does not imply that I am going to tell you all about what manner of creatures chickens are, and how they are produced, for I am writing to editors who must understand something about these things, and for farmer's wives and daughters who know a thing or two as well as I do myself. I don't want to write for any body else—don't intend to do it— and therefore I may confine myself to a few practical hints, which I consider new, and which I hope to make of service to that class of readers for whom they are intended.

Setting.—I always find it best to set hens under shelter and on the ground. If the last is not practicable I have a green sod taken up thin and placed under the nest. This is very important, for the earth contains heat enough to keep the eggs in good condition while the hen is off in quest of food, something which boards or mere litter under the nest, would not be sure to do. I make my nests of straw pounded or bruised finely with the poll of an axe, usually laying it on a smoothly-cut stump of a tree to pound it.

Testing Eggs.—On the evening of the sixth day after setting the hen, I go to the nest with a lighted candle, and holding the eggs up between it and my eyes, carefully observe their appearance. If they look clear and red I know they are sterile, and so take them from the nest; they will not yet have been spoiled by the hen's sitting upon them. The fertile eggs containing birds, will appear dark; that is, they will show no light through them. It is great folly to let a hen sit all through her term on sterile eggs, finally converting them into "rotten eggs," when they may be so easily detected by this simple process.

Assisting Nature.—About a week before the time for hatching, in dry summer weather, I go to the nest when the hen is off, and sprinkle the eggs pretty thoroughly with a little warm water. I find this a great aid to nature in the process of hatching, as it has a tendency to soften the shells. It applies equally to all kinds of poultry.

Roosting.—I find that young chickens should have a clean and well ventilated roosting place. It is for them to sit on the bare ground. The ground of their house should be thoroughly cleaned at least once a week, by scraping it out to the depth of, say two inches and supplying the place with fresh, loose earth. The loose earth acts as an absorbent, and keeps the house pure and the chickens in a healthy condition. [And the loose earth removed once a week from a large flock of chickens is worth almost as much as the poultry, for it is one of the most excellent fertilizers that could be applied to plants. It should be well stirred together and carefully housed until the time for using it is at hand. If convenient, to cover it closely in boxes or barrels, all the better. We have tested quite a variety of fertilizers this season, but none with results better than those shown by the scrapings of our chicken-house.—Ed.]

Feeding.—Very young chickens will have to be fed regularly until they are able to run about in quest of food. In their case most persons in this section use corn-meal slightly wetted, but experience has taught me to believe that corn "grits," given dry is best suited to their wants. I feed my young chickens regularly four times each day. [In regions further North and less favored for poultry-growing, it is usual to feed young birds regularly, but sparingly, about every two hours throughout the day; that is, where persons make poultry-growing a business. Adult poultry is fed twice a day—morning and eveneng—and corn, wheat, oats and barley, with various garden vegetables, finely chopped, generally make up the feed. In our experience we have found them to do as well as could be desired on boiled sweet potatoes mashed and mixed with a small proportion of corn meal—about one part of the latter to four or five of the former. Irish potatoes, carrots, turnips, pumpkins, squashes, apples or peaches treated in the same way will be found to answer every purpose.—Ed.]

Doctoring.—My chickens are never sick, consequently I have no doctoring to do. I think sickness among fowls is more the result of bad management than anything else; and that doctoriug does more harm than good. Remove the cause and the effect will remove itself. I have, on several occasions, when chicken cholera was bad in my neighborhood, given, mixed in the food of my fowls, small proportions of powdered charcoal, oxide of iron and flour of sulphur. I never had a true case of cholera, but do not pretend to hold that the drugs administered should have credit for it. I rather think that keeping the houses clean and their floors well covered with fresh earth has been the medicine that saved my chickens.

Manuring Corn, etc.

Farmers mostly depend upon the decomposition of the grass stubble and roots, and upon lime, as a mature for the corn crop. We have no doubt that much valuable matter is thus rendered available to this crop; but we think every good farmer should provide himself with a portion of animal manure, to give the corn an early start.

Composting in the hill supplies this want, and we are not sure but that those farmers who haul out their manure in the winter and spring, and thus apply it to the corn ground are getting the worth of their money, better than those who allow their manure to waste away in an exposed place until fall.

It has been proven in many instances that guano and super-phosphates, have increased largely the yield of corn.

The following method of raising a corn and potato crop on the same ground, might be tried on a small scale: A gentleman informed us, that one season when planting corn, he occasionally threw a few pieces of potatoes in the hills, which were covered with the corn. When he cut his corn he found a large hill of potatoes under the corn roots; though the corn where the potatoes grew appeared as good as the other hills.

The corn crop is the most reliable and valuable of all others. Do not fail to plant a large quantity. Crows, it is said, will not light upon a corn field, if a string be stretched around the field. Chickens can be rendered nearly harmless by giving them plenty of corn.

Soiling for Dairy Stock.—The question of soiling dairy stock seems just now to be claiming more than usual attention. So far as our observation has extended we find those who are most successful adopt a plan which is in reality a compromise between the old system and that of soiling. One great fault of the soiling system is a want of exercise enough to promote health. We tried it last season upon our dairy cows, by having them out in pasture and feeding them as much green corn as they would eat, and we think this as good a plan as any, and will suit many of our dairymen, who can readily keep in pasture during the summer. This plan will enable them to keep the same amount of stock the whole year.

Graham Dodgers.—Take one pint of buttermilk; stir into it one quart of Graham flour, and add a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in water; add to this 1 well beaten egg and a pinch of salt, with bolted flour enough to make a very stiff batter. Butter flat tins, and take out the batter with a large spoon in small cakes. Bake for twenty minutes, or until well browned, in a hot oven. Break in halves when eaten, and spread with butter—a nice relish for breakfast, lunch or tea.

To Glaze Shirts.—To every quart of made starch add a teaspoonful of starch and one of white soap, scraped fine. Boil the starch, after adding hot water, until you have it as thick as you wish.

BRADBURY PIANO FORTES.

ESTABLISHED IN 1854.

OVER 10,000 MANUFACTURED.

NO BETTER INSTRUMENT I ET.

THE BRADBURY THE

NATIONAL PIANO of the COUNTRY.

READ THE FACTS.

Mrs. U. S. Grant uses in her family the Bradbury and says: "I am perfectly delighted with it."

Theodore Tilton says: "I have had the beautiful Piano so long that now to ask me how I like it is like asking me how I like one of my children. In fact if you were to ask the children I'm afraid they would say they liked it almost as well as they like me. It speaks every day the year round and never looses its voice. I wish its owner could do half so well."

LETTER FROM BISHOP SIMPSON.

Philadelphia, April 27, 1868.

T. G. Smith & Co.—Gents—Having used one of your Bradbury Pianos, it has given great satisfaction to my family and to many visitors who have heard its sweet tones at my house. It is a very superior instrument, both in finish and power. I heartily wish you success as successor to the late Wm. B. Bradbury, in continuing the manufacture of his justly celebrated Pianos. Yours truly,

M. SIMPSON.

Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase, Washington D. C., Decides the Bradbury to be the National Piano of the country.

Vice Admiral D. D. Porter, Washington D. C., "The Bradbury is exquisitely and beautifully proportioned. We are delighted with ours."

Hon. Columbus Delano, Secretary of the Interior, Washington, D. C., calls the Bradbury the Piano for the Interior.

P. M. General Cresswell and Mrs. Cresswell.—"All our friends admire the delightful tones o the Bradbury, used at our receptions."

Robert Bonner, New York Ledger—"At any time will drop the lines of 'Dexter,' to listen to the tones of the Bradbury."

Grand Central Hotel, New York—"In preference to all others, we selected the Bradbury Pianos for our parlors. Our guests pronounce them splendid."

St. Nicholas Hotel, New York.—"Have always used the Bradbury Pianos in our parlors, and take pleasure in recommending them."

Hon. John Simpson, M. P., Canada, says: "The Bradbury can't be excelled. The best in the Dominion."

M. Simpson, Bishop M. E. Church, Philadelphia. "We know of no better Piano than the Bradbury."

E. S. Janes, Bishop M. E. Church, N. Y.—"We know of no better Piano than the Bradbury."

Rev. Dr. John McClinton, Drew Theological Seminary—"My family and friends say the Bradbury is unequalled."

T. S. Arthur, Philadelphia—"We have used for years, and can recommend the Bradbury Piano."

Philip Philips, New York, says, "I have sung with and used the Bradbury Piano in my family for years."

W. G. Fischer, Professor of Music, Girard College, Philadelphia. "I use as my family Piano, the Bradbury, and can with confidence recommend them."

Rev. Daniel Curry, Editor Christian Advocate: "I purchased a Bradbury Piano, and it is a splendid instrument in every respect."

Theodore Tilton, Editor Independent: "If you were to ask my children, I am afraid they would say they liked our Bradbury almost as well as they like me."

Dr. Daniel Wise, Editor Sunday School Advocate. "I use the Bradbury Piano, and think, like his music it cannot be excelled."

Rev. Dr. Ferris, New York. "My Bradbury has stood longer in tune, and sounds better than any Piano in my District."

Rev. Dr. Fields, Editor of the Evangelist. "I have used a Bradbury for years in my family, and think there is none superior."

Sands Street Church Brooklyn, St. Luke's M. E. Church, and a host of other churches use the Bradbury Piano in their Lecture and School Rooms, also the Conservatories and prominent Hotels in the United States.

John Caughey, Beaver Pa., purchased from me three years ago a No. 6 Bradbury, and says: "There is no better, or sweeter toned, or more desirable Piano, according to my judgment and experience, than my Piano. It has given entire satisfaction, and grows better as it becomes older."

Wm. McCoy, of Beaver, Pa., in the spring of 1871, bought from me a No. 8 Bradbury, which has proven to be a superior instrument in every respect.

Miss Mary McGaffick also owns and uses a Bradbury.

LOCAL ITEMS.

We are indebted to H. H. Coe, of Denver, for a copy of the Annual Report of the Denver Board of Trade for 1872. The report says:

"The growth of the City, the enlargement of its trade, and the general prosperity of its citizens during the year 1872, has been exceedingly gratifying. Our population, estimated at from 8,000 to 11,000 on the 1st of January last, is now placed by competent judges at 15,000. The city's taxable wealth, returned at $6,772,908 in 1871, at the end of 1872 exceeds $8,500,000. The trade of the past year shows an excess of $3,500,000 over the previous year.

Every Disease has its Remedy.

Upon this broad fact is founded the whole art and science of medicine.

That every disease has its curable stage, under proper treatment, there can be no doubt.

That they have their incurable stage, under any treatment, may be equally true.

The curable period is during the early part of the disease, of course; the incurable being the advanced condition—the last stage.

To know the precise nature, extent and locality of the disease is of the first importance in the treatment of any case.

This is precisely the reason given by Drs. Oldshue, of Pittsburgh, for bringing into requisition the Microscope, Test-tube, Urinometer and all the Chemical apparatus for the scientific examination of the urine in all chronic and complicated cases.

The long afflicted have not been slow to appreciate these scientific aids, and the consequence is, their office is one continued throng of patients, from all parts of the country, seeking the advantage of this skill in diagnosis.

A knowledge of the appropriate remedy, however, is quite important, as without the remedy no advantage would be gained by knowing the disease.

Every disease has its remedy. This is verified in the fact that different medicines spend their action upon different parts of the human system.

As each particular disease spends its principal baneful action upon a certain organ or tissue of the body, according to its peculiar nature, so each particular remedy spends its medicinal action upon a certain organ or tissue, according to its medicinal qualities.

Having a knowledge of the true nature of the case, as also of the appropriate remedy, the next matter of importance is its proper preparation and application.

This should be carefully attended to, and, as far as practicable, all medicines should be examined by the physician before being put into the hands of the patient or nurse.

This is done in the office of Drs. Oldshue, before mentioned.

All their medicines are compounded and their prescriptions filled by their own special direction, and under their own supervision.

No medicines are passed from their prescriptions but through their hands.

The people of Miller's Run church Presbytery of Pittsburgh, expect to have a grand time on Wednesday and Thursday, May 14th and 15th. The occasion will be the fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of the venerable Rev. Wm. Smith, D. D., as pastor. The following will be the order of exercises: Wednesday, May 14th, 11 o'clock, A. M, Historical Discourse, by Rev. Wm. Smith, D. D; 2 o'clock, P. M, Discourse, by Rev. S. W. Miller—subject, "The Jubilee." Thursday, May 15th, 11 o'clock, A. M, Discourse, by Rev. I. N. Hays—subject, "These Fifty Years in History." One o'clock, P. M., collation in the grove. Sentiments and speeches, closed by Rev. John McCluskey, D. D. This church has supplied a large number of ministers, and also ministers' wives from its own families. A large number of the former students of Jefferson College have been connected with its Sabbath schools and prayer-meetings. No doubt as many as possible of these will be present, while greetings will come not only from every part of this land, but also from heathen countries.

Steinfeld of New Brighton, takes pleasure in informing his customers and all others interested that he has a new and complete stock of mens' and boys' clothing of all sizes and qualtity made up in the latest style, and also a full stock of cassimeres, vestings, coatings, and a general assortment of gents' furnishing goods, including trunks, &c. He earnestly invites comparison and asks that those wishing to purchase anything in his trade to call and examine his stock, for he has made up his mind not to be undersold by any one in the State, and takes pleasure in showing his goods whether you buy or not. Please call and don't forget the place, corner of Broadway and Lock Sts., New Brighton.

Farmers of Beaver county, read this. J. & R. Harsha, at Roger's Ferry, Beaver county, sell all kinds of farming implements. Go to them and buy he well known Wood's Mower and Reaper, improved, at last year's prices. Also the Improved Lock Lever Hay Rake. They sell the latest improved Howe Sewing Machine, one of the best Machines in the world. Their address is Industry, Penn'a.

Old John Robinson's Sea Lion that made such a wonderful escape at Rochester on Monday night, and for the capture of which $1,000 reward was offered, must have been captured by some lucky fellow, since he was on exhibition at Wellsville the next day after the escape. The story was a good free advertisement any way, and no doubt will pay well financially. Any hoax is easily swallowed, however oily it may be, but the Sea Lion hoax went down without any difficulty.

Mr. Jackson Spriggs, formerly a resident of Washington, Pa., but who has lived in this place for the last two years, died very suddenly at his residence on Friday last from an apoplectic attack. His funeral services took place on Tuesday, at which were his children and other relatives who had come from a distance to be present. He was a useful man and his loss will be deeply felt by the community.

To the Lady Readers of the Radical.—The fair readers of this journal have likely all their favorite place for supplying themselves with that all interesting and absorbing article of fashionable dress which is considered the most difficult and finishing of a lady's toilet, we mean Millinery, a Hat or a Bonnet. To those ladies in doubt where to find the right place, to get their Millinery done in the most fashionable and reliable style, at the least cost, we would say go to Mrs. J. H. Bence, 3d street, Beaver, she is one of the most favorably known Practical Milliners in our county, and to her numerous friends and patrons, it is not necessary to say this, but to those who are strangers in our midst, they cannot do better than to give Mrs. Bence a trial. Mr. J. H. Bence has just returned from New York City, where he has made such arrangements as will secure us the styles, in Beaver, on the same day as they are out in New York. It is an established fact that at this establishment, Hats, Bonnets, Ribbons, French Flowers, Silk Scarfs, Hosiery, Kid Gloves (Alexandre's best,) Corsets, Veil stuffs Hair goods, Men's shirts, and other articles to numerous to mention here, can be bought as cheap as at the lowest price house in Pittsburgh. A word to the wise is sufficient, give her an early call at her new and more commodious place, nearly opposite the well known old stand, Third street, Beaver, Pa. may9-2t

The Quarterly Conference in the M. E Church commences on Saturday evening, May 10th, and continues over Sunday. The entire services will be conducted by the Presiding Elder, Rev. S. H. Nesbitt, D. D., late editor of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate. All are cordially invited to be present.
